NEW QUESTION: 2
As part of his new job in the finance department, Julian is taught to use a new accounting program. However, he finds that he does not often need to use this program in his work. So, although he quickly attains decent competence with the program, he does not make much progress thereafter. Which style of learning curve illustrates this situation?
A. plateau learning curve
B. positively accelerating learning curve
C. negatively accelerating learning curve

D. Sshaped learning curve
Answer: A
Explanation:
Explanation: This situation could be illustrated by a plateau learning curve. In this model, the learner makes rapid progress at first, but learning then slows almost to a halt. A plateau learning curve might occur when a task is easy to become competent at but difficult to master, or when a skill is easy to acquire but rarely practiced.
