Explanation:
Some of the features supported by Server App-V are the following:
Windows Services: Server App-V includes the possibility to virtualize Windows Services in a different approach than the one we've seenin Desktop App-V. With Server App-V, the service is installed and placed in the OS as a normal installation of the server application.
Thisway we can monitor it as any local service.
Web applications hosted in IIS: We can virtualize web applications entirely (web sites, virtual directories and application pools) on IIS 6,IIS 7 and IIS 7.5.
WMI: Server App-V Sequencer also captures the WMI providers and/or classes created during an installation.
SQL Services Reporting Services: Even though SQL Server engine is not supported for virtualization, the applications that install SQLServices Reporting Services (SSRS) are supported.
COM/DCOM/COM+ objects: These components are registered in the deployment process, this way other applications in the server canaccess them.
Local users and Groups: If the application is creating users and/or groups during the installation, the Server App-V Sequencer captures itand maintains, including SID, for next deployments.
Not all applications are supported for use with Server App-V. Applications such as antivirus software thatrequire device or kernel driver support are not supported. Server App-V is primarily designed for use withbusiness applications or the business tiers of multi-tiered applications. Consequently some large serverapplications such as Microsoft Exchange Server, Microsoft SQL Server, and Microsoft SharePoint are notsupported. While there is no list of supported applications for use with Server App-V, Server App-V has beenoptimized to create virtual application packages for applications with the following attributes:

State persisted to local disk Microsoft Windows Services Internet Information Services (IIS) Registry COM+ / DCOM Text-based Configuration Files WMI Providers Microsoft SQL Server Reporting Services Local Users and Groups Scheduled Tasks Microsoft SQL Server Databases
